

ABOUT THE FOUNDER

Lee Lukehart is the president and founder of LifescopE Inc. Lee has more than twenty years of experience in the computer industry, having held Director and VP positions in sales, marketing, and product management with reseller, distributor, software publishing, and dot-com firms. In addition to LifescopE, he has his own computer software consultancy firm in Silicon Valley.

In 1994, he founded LifescopE Inc. to provide tools that help others discover and design their ideal lives. He created the Eight Vital Zones® model which became the basis for LifescopE's "whole-person" framework. In 1998, he developed LivingTime®, a software program for recording and charting the events of a person's life.

Lee holds memberships in several industry-related organizations, including the Software Developers Forum (SDF), the Silicon Valley Association of Software Entrepreneurs (SVASE), and the Society for Technical Communication (STC).

He studied mechanical engineering and business at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, entrepreneurship at Stanford University, and received an Associate degree in Technical Communications from De Anza College, in California.
